These Mean More Than Thrift

War Savings Certificates!

The Government could have called them "National Safety Certificates."

For that, in stark truth, is what they are. War Savings Certificates are what, in peace days, we might call a "fine investment." They make for thrift, lay a foundation of security, appeal to the spirit of self-respect and self-reliance. On these grounds, as well as upon the grounds of democratic responsibility of a wider devotion to the democratic creed of voluntary citizenship, they meet a need. But, far more than these things, and more terribly vital, War Savings Certificates are a challenge to patriotism. They are a call to all of us, and provide the means for all of us, to answer the challenge of war service; to dictate of war duty which no one can ever expect to be forgiven for ignoring.

War Savings Certificates are OUR share in this war. They ask us whether, in this terrible conflict, with all that we are or ever hope to be at stake, we are content with lip loyalty to our cause; content with abuse of Hitler; unwilling to make even moderate sacrifice for the sake of all our future.

In war-torn France today the soldiers of democracy are dying for its defense. Are we trying to contribute something to feed and arm them, to sustain their strength, to tell them that back at home their people are supporting them?

This is above all else — the challenge of War Savings Certificates.

Over in Old England across the seas men and women and little children, workers and farmers, old and young, rich and poor, humble and obscure, are offering their all for victory. Giving up, in taxes, subscribing to loan, laying war savings certificates, they are giving a testimony of devotion to democracy and liberty as noble as anything that history has seen. It is for us here in Canada to show whether devotion is ours, whether democracy and freedom mean as much to us as it does to them.

Let us in these coming weeks give proof of such devotion. Let us make this War Savings Certificate campaign a crusade; tell our government and men on land and sea and in the air that we fight behind them. It is, at least, God knows, that we can do.

The Week in Europe With The Troops

THE WAR

The Germans are in control of the Channel Ports. Yesterday they opened up a new offensive on a 100 mile front with the taking of Paris as their objective. The French are blowing up bridges across the Somme and coming that is known as the "typhoon line." Britain is preparing for siege by the Germans. Five hundred civilians have been killed by German bombs in Paris. French Airlines are bombing Munich and other German centres.

The barbaric Germans continue their offensive against civilization.

Nazi sympathizers are being taken into custody. Three enemy aliens were given jail sentences in Medicine Hat last week. Organization of a Home Guard in Canada is being prepared with 10th Earl Taylor of Med. Hat heading the guard for District 13.

The S. A. R. is being mobilized. Not a German is employed in the Civil Government of Calgary. The beautiful Vimy Memorial has been converted into a rubbish heap by the German Vandals, which act alone, proves them to be lacking in any of the finer feelings which civilized people have possessed for generations.

It was not enough that the destructive Hun should cause the unnecessary deaths of thousands of the defenders of civilization today, but he must also disturb the sleep of our beloved dead who have lain "over there" for 25 years of civilization.

That how can man die better, Than facing fearful odds, For the ashes of his fathers, And the temples of his gods.

Frances Gust Again Wins High Honors

Miss Frances Gust, daughter of Mrs. Lillian Gust, has again distinguished herself. Graduate of the last month from Albert's Grammar School she took first place honor in Modern Languages and also received honorable mention for the Governor General's Medal in Modern Languages. Frances has taken honours and scholarships all through her school career and her friends are not surprised that she has again received awards of merit and recognition for a brilliant graduation.

What is Happening In Parliament

OTTAWA LETTER

At this Session on account of the large war expenditure, money will be voted only in small quantities for other activities. The amount for the P. P. R. is being greatly reduced. The works that have been completed and completed will be paid for. The applications that have been approved will be proceeded with but no new work will be started this year. Surveys that have been started will be completed so that reconstruction and rehabilitation plans will be well in hand to cope with post war problems.

The War has placed new responsibilities on all of us. It takes money, and lots of it, to carry on this the biggest job Canada has ever undertaken. Money is necessary to save the most precious life in the world, the life of Liberty.

Money subscribed now for War savings certificates will be paid back in 7 1/2 years at Compound Interest the Government plans and thus it should come a little time when loan years are expected. Certificates can be purchased at banks, Post Offices and other offices.

The Commonwealth Air Training scheme is to be speeded up. The new Minister of Defence for Air gave assurance that every Air Training field approved including those calling for completion in 1942 will be finished by this year.

On Monday of this week authority was given for the recruitment of Seven thousand men for the units to comprise the nucleus of a 4th division and the taking on of 5,000 men for the Air Force.

This Session is a War Session and little else is being mentioned. Precautions against 6th Column activities are certainly mounting. A Toronto member on Tuesday read a long list of organizations represented in Toronto with the openly avowed purpose of destroying the British Empire. Bridges, Canals and other structures are being guarded day and night and the loyalty of some of the guards has been questioned. Sentiment in the House changes rapidly. When the session started the Minister of Justice was being criticized for making regulations to severe and now the picture has so altered that he is being urged to be more severe with any suspicion of subversive activities.

The magazine of "The London Book Club" reports as follows: One evening about 30 people were arguing that liberty and individual freedom meant nothing and that there was no difference between working conditions in England and in Germany. To ward midnight they asked a German refugee what he thought of his answer was simple. He took off his coat, vest and shirt and showed deep scars on his back. "That happened to me in Germany because I advocated Socialism at a private home at which a Gestapo spy was present. In Germany all of you would be in Concentration camps to morrow."

Redcliff Young Ladies Excel in Their Studies

Normal... and... University Student Take Honors

Miss Zella Bamforth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bamforth of Redcliff who graduates from Calgary Normal School shortly, has made a splendid showing in her year's work.

Zella distinguished herself in three different branches of her work, and took first class honors on the whole. She has brought credit to herself, to her parents and to Redcliff her home town. We are proud of her and extend to her our heartiest congratulations.

Congratulations are also due Mrs. Carol Sellhorn, daughter of Mrs. L. Sellhorn, who won 1st Class Honors in Mathematics in her year's work at Alberta University.

Both these young ladies were graduates of Redcliff High School last year, and have been outstanding students during their junior school life.

The magazine of "The London Book Club" reports as follows: One evening about 30 people were arguing that liberty and individual freedom meant nothing and that there was no difference between working conditions in England and in Germany. Mr. Vogstad Sends Message to Friends

Editor, The Review

We are again settled in our new home in B.C. We like the country, the climate, the summer here. The weather since we came here has been varied with light rain and sunshine; but the nights here are rather cool we have had one night of frost, a few miles east from us. These majestic mountains to the north are indeed a sight of beauty and awe, while they are the mind for a moment, away the hustle and bustle of the day and the sad thoughts of this savage war raging in Europe today.

With regard to this war, terrible as it is, I believe that out of this conflict and life and death struggle, will gradually emerge a new and better civilization, God helping.

It was rather a surprise for myself that I or we should come to live at the Coast.

I used to be content to live in Redcliff. I like Redcliff and the people of Redcliff and the nearby little city of Medicine Hat. But as we begin to live here it was best for us to live near some one of our children, as we now do and of course their winters here are milder too.

Leaving, I wish to thank the people of Redcliff, friends and neighbors and all, for the time, the many years, I lived among you, and especially I want to thank the Legion, my comrades there, for their good will and kindness towards me.

Yours
Oscar Vogstad

A Ponderous Tome

A ponderous tome, comprising nearly a thousand pages, to say nothing of innumerable appendices and reams of statistics, the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations provides plenty of food for thought and a lot of material for discussion, and it is a reasonable conclusion that it will occasion a great deal of talk before its recommendations are implemented.

It is safe to say that no more important document has been presented to the nation since Confederation and it requires little reflection to state that it is high time that some of the changes recommended by Mr. Birks and his colleagues were put into effect. A lot of water has flowed under the bridge in this rapidly growing country since the date when the provinces were welded into a great geographical entity—Canada—by the fathers of Confederation in 1867.

Though the fathers of Confederation can be credited with a great deal of wisdom and some foresight when they allocated to the Dominion and its provinces their several spheres of jurisdiction, even they could not have been expected to predict the immense growth, the great changes, the enormous diversity and scope of problems which would come about in less than three quarters of a century. The truth of the matter is that the country has outgrown the rules and regulations laid down for its guidance and the conduct of its affairs, though those rules and regulations were admirably suited to its needs at the time they were formulated.

As a result of these great and in many cases unpredictable changes, and of the changed conditions under which the national, provincial and municipal governments have to operate to-day, the clothes which clad the lusty infant in 1867 are likely to choke the full grown adult of to-day. Hence new clothes must be cut and fashioned to suit the requirements of the present.

Feasible Reception

While it is yet too early to pronounce any conclusive opinion on the recommendations of the Birks Commission as a whole, its general tenor appeared when first released to meet with a favorable reception in the west by those who might be expected to be competent to give an opinion on such weighty subjects and based solely on newspaper summaries of the contents of the document.

Certainly there can be no two opinions on the recommendation that the Federal government assume full responsibility for unemployment relief, though municipal men are inclined to question the decision that this responsibility should be confined to the employees, on the ground that the unemployed jobs have multiplied enormously during the depression decade. It can be safely assumed that strong pressure will be exerted to secure a greater measure of federal aid, if not full responsibility, for the unemployed on relief.

On the first appearance of the summary of the report municipal men were also inclined to look askance at the absence of any definite recommendations for relief from municipal indebtedness. It may be presumed, however, that the Commission took the view that this was not a matter for a body dealing with Dominion-provincial relations, since the municipalities are creatures of the respective provinces which set them up and that this is a matter which the provinces should deal with themselves. No doubt, also, it was felt that the financial relations between the municipalities and the provinces are so variable in different parts of the country that the Commission should not delve into this subject beyond making a recommendation that the provinces assume a greater measure of control over municipal finances.

A Secondary Consideration

While, as already stated, it is high time that the country receive such a report as that submitted by the Birks body and make some changes in the constitution in the direction of better adaptation of government to the present day requirements of the country and its constituent parts, it is unfortunate that it comes at a time when the nation is bending all its energies to the prosecution of a war, which is evidently to be waged to a finish.

The term "fortunate" is used, because, while much important measure as those recommended by the Royal Commission are not to meet the light; in fact, deserve and should have the most serious and thoughtful consideration before action upon them is taken, if time is taken by the national government and those of the provinces to such questions at the present time it might detract somewhat from the country's war effort. On the other hand, the financial relationships between the Dominion and the provinces are too important to be dealt with hastily and without a full quota of discussion.

In view of the fact that this country is now engaged in a struggle for its very existence, it may be necessary to defer action on the report until such time as more attention can be given such problems without running any risk of interfering with a matter of even greater importance.

Appeal For Funds

D. H. Gibson, of Toronto, Dominion president of the Navy League of Canada, announced that a Dominion-wide appeal for funds in carry on the work of assisting men and the British and Canadian navies and the mercantile marine, would be launched the latter part of September. Gibson said the appeal will be made to Canadians on behalf of the work in Britain as well as to Canada.

Air Pilots

Fighting Almost Said to Usually Goodly have blue eyes.

This is not a matter of mere coincidence. Scientific tests, carried out with the object of finding the ideal light-colored pilot, have proved that all pilots must be of good sound stock and must pass a strict medical examination. This includes tests to find whether the applicant can withstand the strain of flying in all climates and all altitudes. Eyesight must be first class with correct color vision and muscular balance.

The ears, nose and throat examination also is severe. Good hearing is essential, variations in the sound of the engine may be important, and a pilot must be able to hear messages coming through his earphones under any conditions of noise. But is the man's general characteristics which are the real points. Good fighter pilots vary a great deal in appearance in height, chest measurement and in purely physical characteristics—but they all have something in common. They are a quality which indicates good mental and physical stamina. As to whether the color of the candidate's eyes is any real guide, medical authorities are doubtful, but while brown or gray eyes go with a sympathetic temperament, the steady blue denotes the independent, confident nature of the ideal fighter pilot.

Experiments To Determine Whether Hot Water Freezes Faster Than Cold

Does hot water freeze faster than cold water? This has been a subject of much controversy among laymen. Now the scientists have entered the discussion, with conflicting findings. To the physicist there is just one answer, if the experiment is performed under ideal conditions, that cold water will freeze faster than hot. But in practical experiments it does not always appear to attain ideal conditions, and consequently inconclusive, real or apparent, develop.

It was pointed out in the discussion that hot water evaporated faster than cold, and that if the experiments were started with equal amounts of water the hotter one would soon become much smaller. This is true, but the experiment would be started with equal amounts of water. This also would make the experiment unscientific because the starting conditions were not controlled.

Two series of experiments were made by Dr. G. W. Washburn, of the University of California, in 1926. In the first series, in four of them, 250 cubic centimeters of water at 20°C. were placed in four identical metal cylinders, and in the four other equal amounts of water were placed at the same temperature in four identical metal cylinders. The time in which each sample to freeze in outdoor temperatures of slightly above zero was recorded.

Water boils at a temperature of 100 degrees, Fahrenheit, at the 10,000-foot altitude where the experiments were made. The times in which the water at the different degrees was frozen were: 199 degrees, 54 minutes; 86 degrees, 42 minutes; 60 degrees, 39 minutes; 50 degrees, 37 minutes. When the pie tin was used there was a difference of 20 percent was obtained. The freezing times were: 199 degrees, 31 minutes; 86 degrees, 23 minutes; 60 degrees, 20 minutes; 50 degrees, 19 minutes.

It is apparent from these figures that the shape of the vessel has a great effect on the freezing time. The boiling water took 54 minutes to freeze when it was placed in a cylinder, but only 31 minutes when placed in a pie tin. When the pie tin was used there was little difference in the time whether the water was placed at the boiling point or 149 degrees (31 and 29 minutes respectively).

The trouble with most experiments is that they are not made under carefully controlled conditions. Freshly boiled water is a different state from unboiled water. Heating drives dissolved gases out of water. As water cools it will re-absorb gases. Boiling will precipitate certain dissolved solids. All of these changes make a difference in the rate at which water will absorb heat or give it up.

In scientific tests these factors must be controlled, as well as the air pressure at which the tests are made. The temperature to which the water is exposed must be kept constant, and the specific heat of the vessel in which the water is contained must be considered. When these conditions are observed and the difference between two samples of water is its temperature, then the cold water will freeze faster than the hot. —By John J. O'Neill in the New York Herald Tribune.

Civilians Trained To Meet Any Wartime Emergency

Through the close collaboration of provincial governments with the department of pensions and national health in Ottawa, civilian defence corps in the seaboard provinces of Canada have reached a high degree of organization to meet any wartime emergency arising from enemy raids, sabotage, fire or an explosion in vital ports.

Halifax has a trained corps of 600 civilian workers and 200 air raid wardens, trained by the St. John's Ambulance Association.

Similar organizations exist in Sydney, Saint John, Quebec, Vancouver, Victoria, Nanaimo and Prince Rupert.

But a man with an inventive turn of mind has done something about this question of "map trouble".

He has devised a simple case with two rollers. The map is inserted like a roll of camera film, and a small transparent window permits of easy reading. Air Training Plan

Airmen From Australia And New Zealand Coming Here For Training

Canada will soon welcome the first contingents of airmen from Australia and New Zealand who are coming here for advanced training in accordance with the provisions of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. In this connection, Air Minister J. V. Fairbairn, of Ottawa, announced that 2,000 Australian pilots and 1,800 air observers and gunners will be called up before the year end. The first Australian air crew personnel will arrive for advanced training in Canada about August. The Air Minister announced that thereafter a fresh group would reach Canada every month.

Meanwhile the organization of the Empire Training Plan proceeds at a fast pace throughout Canada, even ahead of its pre-arranged schedule, according to J. R. Duncan, Assistant Deputy Minister of National Defence for Air Services.

Training operations in Western Canada advanced steadily from the ultimate objective with the appointment of Group Captain Leigh Forbes Stevenson to the command of No. 4 Training Command with headquarters in Regina, Sask. Group Captain Forbes is proceeding with the organization for the administration of training schools and depots in southwestern Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. He will be 23 units under his jurisdiction. Group Captain Forbes comes from Toronto, where he was in command of No. 1 Training Command during the absence in England of Air Commodore A. A. H. Duncan, who was in command of the R.C.A.P. Station at Camp Borden.

The Department of National Defence also announces the appointment of Wing Commander George Robert Horwath, M.C., as Senior Staff Officer for No. 4 Training Command. Wing Commander Horwath has a brilliant record of service, having been in the Royal Air Force in France during the Great War. He has been intimately concerned with the R.C.A.P. since in various capacities, acquiring close knowledge of flying conditions in the West after spending two years at the High River Station, and at Winnipeg. Wing Commander Horwath was director of training at Air Force Headquarters for two years and was in command of No. 3 Army Co-operation Squadron, personnel of which went to England with the first R.C.A.P. unit ever to proceed overseas on active service.

The Canadian Flying Club Association, which will play an important role in the training of pilots in connection with the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, has signified its intention of giving preference to Canadians in selecting several hundred civilian instructors for the 26 elementary flying schools being licensed. First choice will be given to Canadian instructors for the 26 elementary flying schools being licensed. First choice will be given to Canadian instructors for the 26 elementary flying schools being licensed. First choice will be given to Canadian instructors for the 26 elementary flying schools being licensed.

Flying Clubs will be given a special charter by the Department in contract with the government for the operation of elementary schools. Private selected as instructors will retain their civilian status.

After Valuable Formula

German Attack Subs Chemist In Laboratory At Los Angeles

Carl Albin, Swiss chemist, brought to Los Angeles by an oil company to perfect his formula for leadless high test gasoline, told police he was attacked in his laboratory by two German-speaking men. They demanded his formula.

The chemist told Det. Leonard L. Berry he smashed a light bulb, but the men overpowered him in the darkness and started to leave with his documents. In desperation, he hurled a half-gallon container of sulphuric acid and one of the men cried "Get me out of here, I'm blinded."

Albin said he recovered his brief case and ran after the men, one of whom fired at him several times before they escaped in a gray coupe.

His home and his laboratory both had been entered previously, the chemist said, and some correspondence stolen.

Just As Expected

Churchill Government Does Not Find Favor In Dictator Countries

As was to be expected, the dictator countries do not take kindly to the Churchill Government. Since the new Prime Minister has had the happy faculty of getting under the Nazi skin, Germany is particularly agitated over the change in ministries. "From a fellow like Churchill," an authorized British source observed, "we may now expect every crime and every inhumanity thinkable." National apathy fears that its own reprehensible methods will be followed by the new British Government.

There will, however, be no duplication of these methods. Churchill is a hard hitter, but he always hits above the belt. Germany may continue to commit every crime and inhumanity thinkable, but Britain will not reply in kind. That is not the British way. There may be bulldogged determination in the British make-up, but there is no brutality. As has characterized Hitler ever since his benchmen. While this is so, Britain, under Churchill's initiative and force, will offer intended and well-considered resistance to the evil designs of the Nazis and will inflict justifiable reprisals when these are provoked. It is why his appointment to the driving rear of Britain is causing forearm count in Germany.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Homes For British Children

Ten Thousand Wards Could Be Absorbed In N.C.

Mrs. G. M. Murray, wife of the Liberal member of the British Columbia legislature for Lillooet, said in a speech in Senatorial Chamber, W.C. that 10,000 refugee children from England could immediately be absorbed in reliable British Columbia homes for children.

Supporting proposals of Senator Wilm, chairman of the Canadian National Committee on refugees, in bringing out European children from England for the duration of the war, Mrs. Murray said that the plan be advanced speedily.

"May I suggest the ages be from eight to 14 and that the Women's Institutes of Canada be the nucleus of volunteer workers under government endorsement whose plan be made a part of our national program to help the Empire," Mrs. Murray said.

"May I further urge that all possible steps be employed and to inspire respect that Canada's sacrifice in providing homes for British children will be handsomely rewarded in the noblest immigration policies that this nation could hope for."

Expelled As Nuisances

Stewardesses From German Airlines Arrived Privately In South Africa

South Africa has sent 110 more months to feed the women passengers and stewardesses brought here from the German liner Wal, which was scuttled by her crew off Cape Point.

The men brought off the ship were interned but the women were allowed to live with friends in Cape Town under the supervision of the control authorities. They repaid this privilege by subversive acts which aroused widespread indignation. The outstanding act of one of the women was an attempt to set fire to the collection box for the Lord Mayor's National Fund.

The authorities ordered the women to be expelled as "Nazi nuisances." An opportunity was found to ship them, in a Dutch liner, the Union government paying their fares. They will be taken to the frontier of Holland and handed over to the German authorities.

Invitation To Dinner

Druggist Takes A Hand In Doctoring Doctor's Letter

An invitation to dinner had been sent to the newly settled physician. In reply, the hostess received an absurdly flippant letter.

"If I were you," suggested her husband, "I should take it to the druggist. Druggists can always read doctor's letters, however badly they are written."

The druggist looked at the slip of note paper, went into his dispensary and returned a few minutes later with a bottle, which he handed over the counter.

"There you are, madam," he said. "That will be 75 cents."—Wall Street Journal.

This was a modern bridge near the Belgian city of Liege, until the German War Machine marched across the borders of the little country. Belgian engineers promptly view up the bridge to stop the German advance from using it as a way of crossing the river.

World Federations

British Conception Of Empire Force In Human Progress

Finally, imperialism makes no claim to be an end in itself. It has been a mighty force in human progress, and it has still an incalculable part to play in maintaining civilization against the vast destructive forces that threaten it. But already it shows signs of developing into something larger.

In the midst of the devastation of the second Great War, no one can now doubt the urgency of planning for the reconstitution of that world order which both the ancient and the medieval Empire felt after, but failed to grasp. There is still power in the conception of Empire to work for that ideal. All who would attempt, after the passions now raging are abated, to unite all the nations in a wider fellowship, must take account of the success already achieved by Great Britain and France in drawing together smaller, but still very large and varied, agglomerations of peoples.

Bereft our eyes today we see these two Empires of the free moving towards ever closer union. Here if anywhere is the firm foundation for "the Parliament of Man, the Federation of the world."—London Times.

Salter To Wait

He was full of patriotic ardor when he joined the Army. He meant to prove from the ranks as soon as possible.

So hard did he work that in three months he was made a lance-corporal. Writing to his wife to tell her the great news, he added:

"It's my first step to promotion, but don't move to a larger house yet, and speak to the neighbors as usual."

A Great Englishman

Neville Chamberlain Will Live Forever in British History

A word at this hour for Mr. Chamberlain. No one who listened to his inspiring valour could think other than that this was the voice of a great Englishman. Here was no selfish spirit, no whine of a defeated personal ambition. Here instead was a man putting England and England's Empire before all else, stepping back into the ranks to march and fight for his successor.

History, we think, will be kind to Neville Chamberlain. It will not attach blame to him, as some attach blame to him now, for the failure of Norway. It will say of him, as should be said of him now, that as Prime Minister he could not be blamed for the military or naval strategy of Norway; that he was compelled, as any other Prime Minister must have been compelled, to take the advice of his experts. It acceptance of that advice meant wrong for Chamberlain it must have been equal wrong for every one of his ministers.

And history, we imagine, will say of Chamberlain: That at Munich he probably saved the British Empire from destruction. We know now that Hitler's air held the power in the hour of Munich to wreak devastation upon the British Isles; we must believe that Chamberlain, by delaying war, gave Britain the breathing spell vital to her salvation. That, in history, will be tremendous vindication.—Ottawa Journal.

Nearly Two Centuries Ago

Old Paper Tells Of Prussian Advance On Holland In 1717.

"German troops mass on the border of the Netherlands." Statements like this are not new to the people of Holland, according to an old copy of the Moniteur Gazette of 1772, found by J. R. Miller, Gerrard street, Toronto. Mr. Miller has across the old copies of the paper when moving recently.

On the front page of the paper is a statement issued by Van Doorn, governor of the Netherlands 168 years ago. A message to the people of Holland said: "Prussian troops have surrounded our borders but we have no cause to feel alarmed."

French troops were rushing to the aid of Belgium and Holland. November 18, 1772, was a momentous day. Heads of Belgium, France and Holland held a conference to reach an agreement on how to turn back the Prussian force.

The chief charges for ships from Montreal and Quebec if the old days were taken for Liverpool. Among the advertisements is an item on the sailing of the barge Arabella from Quebec bound for Liverpool. The ad reads: "The barge Arabella will load a cargo of ash to nine tons. The boat has accommodations for nearly eight passengers. Please consult her agent."

Introduced Themselves

They were late, and very conscious of it. Two of them found seats, the other two, a sergeant and a private, walked up the centre aisle. At that moment the preacher announced his text: "Paul I know, Cephus I know, but who are these?"

The sergeant paused in his stride then sang out: "Glad to have the pleasure, your reverence. This is Jack McTavish from Glasgow and I'm Willie Hope from Belfast."

It has been estimated that approximately one-half of the fishermen of the world are Japanese.

Service Badges

Members Of Canadian Forces Now Refused To Receive Badges

Plans for a service badge for members of Canada's fighting forces now retired from active service were announced in an order-in-council tabled in parliament.

They will be white metal buttons bearing three maple leaves and three fleur-de-lis in red enamel with the single word "Service" in a panel. A Union Jack will be a central figure.

Members of the navy, the army or army who have served three continuous months with pay and have been retained through the physical disability will be the only persons entitled to wear the badge, and a penalty of $500 fine or six months imprisonment will be imposed for unauthorized use of such badges.

The national defence department has been authorized to grant captain's pay and certain allowances to a certain number of the personnel of auxiliary war service organizations looking after the comfort and entertainment of Canada's armed forces.

The order, signed April 18, affects some personnel of the Canadian Legion war service, the Young Men's Christian Association, Salvation Army and Knights of Columbus. The proportion of such personnel entitled to captain's pay and allowances was not stated.

Captain's pay is $5.50 a day plus a subsistence living allowance of $1.70 a day. The order stipulates that dependents' allowances of $50 a month for a wife plus $15 a month for each of two children, shall not be paid to such personnel.

An appropriation of $1,700,000 under the War Measures Act for the acquisition of vessels for the protection of Canadian shipping has been made by the Dominion government, according to an order-in-council.

Preserving Wild Flowers

Express Fears That Many Will Knowingly Destroy

Some of Canada's most beautiful wild flowers are living in jeopardy. For many years the system of land development has been destroying wild flowers and their habitats, clearing and cultivating farm lands, building up cities, close grazing of woods and woodlands, forest fire, and erosion of the soil have all been responsible for the destruction of the natural beauty of Canada.

The soil has been increased by ignorance or thoughtlessness of persons in regard to what is left of the wild flowers, and unless some care is taken by the present generation and its successors, there is the possibility that no wild flowers will be left in the Dominion.

The preservation of wild flowers is not a mean that no one is to pick them, but it does demand a little thought on the part of the picker. For example, some wild flowers should not be picked at all. Plants like the white trillium are best left alone because they cannot be picked without removing the plant, which upon which depends the maturing of the bulbous root for the following season's crop of flowers.

It is against recklessness plucking of wild flowers that the various horticultural societies throughout the Dominion make an appeal to the people of Canada.

Give Up Pensions

Volunteer Forgo Payments To Help Win The War

Ten Canadian veterans of the first World War are now surrendering either the whole or part of their pensions to Canada's war cause. A pensioner of London, Ontario, surrendered his monthly pension of $11.50 from March, 1940. Another pensioner from Killam, Alberta, announced a reduction of $11.50 a month. The other eight, making contributions from their monthly pension, include a major general now resident in Italy and a private resident in Greece.

JUNE
What is so rare as a day in June?
Then if ever come perfect day,
Then Heaven tries the Earth.
If it be in June,
And over it softly her warm
ear lays,
Whether we look or whether

We hear life murmur or see it

Every clod feels a stir of

A feeling within it that reach a passion that says:
And groping blindly above it
for light,
Grows to a soul in grass and flowers.
